Tapping In(tuit)

Thia Sadlek, Religious Services Team

Service

10 a.m.

The Lorax

Mike Wilcox, Religious Services Team

What was the Lorax? And why was it there on the far end of town where the Grickle Grass grows? What happened to the Brown Bar-ba-Loots, Humming Fish and the beautiful Truffula Trees the place once sowed? Come to the service by Mike Wilcox of the Religious Services Team to learn the message of the Lorax. Then you will know.

11:15 a.m.

10 a.m.

Yertle the Turtle

John DeGreve, Religious Services Team

Please join John DeGreve as he reviews these Dr. Seuss stories that lead us to the discussion and discovery of community building blocks and personal empowerment. Turtles will again reign this Sunday. "All the turtles are free as turtles and, maybe, all creatures should be." Along with birds of too many feathers! Oh, the places we'll go... together - you'll see!

"His Hands, His Tools, His Sex, His Dress: Lesbian Writers on Their Fathers"
by Catherine Reid

"His Hands, His Tools, His Sex, His Dress" examines the complicated and critical relationship between lesbians and their fathers and the way it permeates and shapes their lives.

This collection of poems and essays by 23 critically acclaimed lesbian writers - including Tristan Taormino, Gretchen Legler, Karin Cook, and Holly Hughes - encompasses the breadth of American experience, white and black, Jewish and Catholic, wealthy and working-class and poor. "His Hands, His Tools, His Sex, His Dress" expresses all the love, power, and pain of the dynamic relationship between fathers and lesbian daughters.

"At last, a book about the father-lesbian daughter relationship -- the identifications, attractions, conflicts, and joys. A must read." -- Suzanne Lasenza, coeditor of Lesbians and Psychoanalysis.
